What's Sweat?

You're biking up a hill, pedaling as hard as you can. You're almost there and — what's this? Your back is all wet and so is your face. Don't sweat it — it's only sweat!

Your body works best when its temperature is about 98.6°F (37°C). When your body gets hotter than that, your brain doesn't like it — it wants your body to stay cool and comfortable. So the part of your brain that controls temperature, called the hypothalamus (say: hi-po-THAL-uh-mus), sends a message to your body, telling it to sweat.

The sweat leaves your skin through tiny holes called pores. When the sweat hits the air, the air makes it evaporate (this means it turns from a liquid to a vapor). As the sweat evaporates off your skin, you cool down.

Sweat is a great cooling system, but if you're sweating a lot on a hot day or after playing hard you could be losing too much water through your skin. Then you need to put liquid back in your body by drinking plenty of water so you won't get dehydrated (say: dee-HI-drayt-ed).

Dehydration

What Is Dehydration?

When it's hot outside and you've been sweating, you get thirsty. Why? Thirst can be a sign of dehydration (say: dee-hye-DRAY-shun). Dehydration means that your body doesn't have enough water in it to keep it working right. A person gets water by drinking and eating. You lose water when you sweat, go to the bathroom, or get sick. You even lose a little water when you breathe. Our bodies need water to work properly. If you don't replace the water your body has lost, you might start feeling sick.

What Are the Signs of Dehydration?

Being thirsty is the top clue. Here are some other signs that a person might be dehydrated: feeling lightheaded, dizzy, or tired, rapid heartbeat, dry lips and mouth.

What Should I Do?

If you can, try not to get dehydrated in the first place. If you're going to be going outside, it's a good idea to drink water before, during, and after you play, especially if it's hot. Also, limit soda and other sugary drinks, such as fruit punches, lemonades, and iced teas. These drinks have a lot of sugar that your body doesn't need. Some also contain caffeine, which can make you go to the bathroom a lot more. In other words, it tells your body to get rid of fluids. And as you now know, that's the opposite of what you need to do if you're dehydrated!
